Performative Tectonics: Architecture + Fashion

Architecture and fashion have many parallels. Fashion designers speak of cut, craftsmanship, and fabric, while architects are concerned with form, tectonics, and materiality. Both disciplines emphasize performance, movement, and the body in space. Interactions between the often insular cultures of architects and fashion designers may lead to copious possibilities.

This talk will examine transdisciplinary potentials between architecture and fashion design.